

“HITTING IT OUT OF THE PARK”: MAKING A PITCH FOR ALMSGIVING

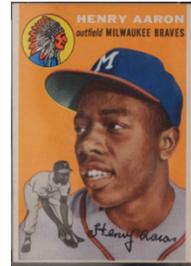

It must be tough to be a school age kid today! In years to come, books will be written, papers delivered at academic conferences— all centered upon the high cost of not returning to in-person education during the pandemic. By contrast, the Wall St. Journal published an op-ed by Bill McGurn highlighting the Catholic school system and its response to the pandemic. Initially, the pandemic’s economic toll in part caused 107 schools to close in 2020, but when the delay of opening the public schools became widely known, enrollments rebounded. (+ 5.5% here in the Archdiocese!)

In his piece, the author noted, “in 1997 then-Sen. Biden did declare on the floor that the plight of children ‘presently caught in a failed public school’ was leading him to rethink his opposition to vouchers. Perhaps now, with so many public-school systems leaving their students in the lurch, would be a good moment for another reconsideration.” We shall see, but it illustrates that the Catholic schools are “hitting it out of the park” this year, while also keeping kids safe and healthy. They have made accommodations— detailed and expensive ones— to ensure compliance with CDC guidelines, yet haven’t missed a beat in providing quality, faith-based education. For Catholic school teachers, it is a passion. While able to command higher salaries elsewhere, they remain committed to passing along the faith.

I have been praying— a lot in fact— about my Lenten almsgiving. I keep these commitments private, but not this year, and all because of some little pieces of cardboard, measuring 3.5 x 2.5 in. that I keep in a box. You see, shortly after the great Hank Aaron died at age 86 on January 22, an idea popped into my head— “If you wish to be perfect, go, sell what you have and give to [the] poor, and you will have treasure in heaven.” (Mt. 19:21) Aaron was a legend and a boyhood hero. While Jackie Robinson broke the color barrier with his debut in 1947 (the 75th anniversary is next spring), Aaron was arguably the game’s biggest star when he played. Both men suffered on account of their skin color. Here’s one letter Aaron received in 1973: “You are not going to break his record established by the great Babe Ruth if I can help it. Whites are far more superior than [slur]...my gun is watching your every black move.” How pathetic—imagine dealing with this!

Growing up in Mobile, Alabama, Aaron’s life story was steeped in racial segregation. He had to be assigned a bodyguard as he neared Ruth’s record. I watched that game on April 8, 1974, marveling that I was witnessing sports history. The season had just begun— he had ended 1973 with 713 HR. He belted a 4th inning pitch off of Dodger’s pitcher Al Downing (who is infamous for his role!) Aaron was the last player from the old “Negro” League to also compete in the majors. He still holds the record as the all-time leader with 2,297 Runs Batted In (RBI). In my book, he still holds the record for home runs at 755. I refuse to recognize Barry Bonds record. Robinson and Aaron— giants of the game and civil rights icons, not by choice, but by necessity. Aaron’s death caused me to dig out my early 1970’s baseball card collection, mostly dormant, though I added a few key cards as an adult. Still, Jesus’ words in Mt. 19:21 resonate in my heart.

After prayer and seeing how card values have increased, I am liquidating my card collection and donating 100% of the auction proceeds to the Aim Higher Foundation. (visit their website here) AHF is providing $1000 scholarships to nearly 2000 students in the Archdiocese this year! The value of my collection is largely due to two purchases of Robinson and Aaron rookie cards, always more valuable. The Aaron Card (1954 Topps #128) is professionally graded (scale of 1 to 10) as Excellent (PSA 5); the Robinson (Leaf 1948) as Very Good (PSA 4), making them desirable cards for collectors– and investors! I am hoping there may be individuals who would appreciate owning the cards, knowing that their purchase is making a difference in families being able to attend Catholic grade schools. Maybe they will even bid up the items a little over the market value! Aim Higher has done a great job in helping families bridge the gap to enroll in these schools. I encourage you to visit their website to learn more. I will also auction these rookie cards: Harmon Killebrew (1955-PSA 5), Tony Oliva (1963-PSA 6), Rod Carew (1967-PSA 6) and Steelers QB Terry Bradshaw (PSA 7). Shhh, the 1971 Bradshaw was likely my brother's!

Lent begins this Wednesday. Almsgiving is a constitutive element of the season. This is a leap of faith. Humanly speaking, it will be bittersweet to part with childhood memories. Yet if more children can forge new memories and be formed as faithful Catholics– then, it's really not much of a sacrifice at all. If any of you have vintage baseball cards tucked away, might you consider joining me? I'd love to add a few cards, especially rookie cards in excellent condition. This auction will be linked from the AHF website. If anyone has an extra Topps 1952 Mickey Mantle (i.e. the most celebrated rookie card in the modern era!), I'll gladly add it to the list! All joking aside, if you desire to support the cause, simply e-mail me at frubel@cathedralsaintpaul.org or Aim Higher President Jean Houghton at jhoughton@aimhigherfoundation.org and we can discuss options. Let us remember, there is great joy in giving, and you can't take it with you!
